President assures victims of devastation

By Philip C. Talano and TJ Burgoine

"YOU ARE not alone to fend for yourselves," President Aquino yesterday assured the flood victims huddled at evacuation centers across Metropolitan Manila and in nearby provinces.

Earlier in the day, President Aquino took his celebrity sister Kris Aquino to Marikina City to visit residents relief from floods the past three days.

The President, his wife and government officials had to use an Army truck to negotiate flooded streets to get to the elementary school where the evacuees sought shelter from rising floodwaters.

"I'm very happy to see them both," Mary Manalastas, 60, said after receiving a bag of groceries from the President, referring to the Aquino siblings.

Mr. Aquino, who also brought some canned food to his wife's home, approved.

Bad weather delays CJ nominations

By Christian O. Rosales

THE BAD weather is delaying the nominations for the members of second Chief Justice Renato Corona.

The Judicial and the Council of JSC postponed yesterday the holding of a vote for its top three choices for Chief Justice due to the inclement rain and heavy flooding in Metro Manila.

Lawyer Jose Melito, who represents the candidate to the JSC, said the eight-member panel would likely meet on Monday.

The JSC had originally been scheduled to vote last Monday but was held in its entirety to give Sen. Francisco Duterte, who is running for the presidency, time to meet with the members of the JSC on the 20 members.

However, bad weather postponed the vote.

Renato Corona is the current Chief Justice of the Philippines. He was appointed to the position by President Benigno Aquino III in 2010.

Corona is a member of the Integrated Bar of the Philippines (IBP) and is a member of the Philippine Judicial Academy (PJA).

Corona is also a member of the Philippine Judicial Council (PJC) and is a member of the Philippine Judicial Conference (PJC).

The JSC is a body of eight members, including the Chief Justice, who are responsible for recommending and appointing judges to the judiciary.

Maguindanao clashes trap 700 more

Fighting casts shadow on talks, but optimism stays

MANILA CITY—The continuing clashes between Moro Islamic Liberation Front (MILF) and government soldiers are pushing government negotiators to reach a peace agreement even with the Moro Islamic Liberation Front (MILF).

These incidents were an other purpose than to strengthen the peace talks, but to find a credible, credible and just political settlement with the MILF, said Marvic Leonido, chief government negotiator, in his opening statement to the 30th anniversary of the 1986 Philippine Revolution.

"Our negotiations are proceeding with confidence and optimism. We will certainly not give up because of some isolated incidents. We must see that the war is not a war of attrition, but a war of attrition and mutual destruction," Leonido said.

Under the terms of the ceasefire, government forces are supposed to withdraw from the area. But the MILF is not withdrawing from the area.

"The more on the ground, the more we will see that the war is not a war of attrition, but a war of attrition and mutual destruction," Leonido said.

Should the talks "nevertheless be able to conclude with the signing of the 30th anniversary of the 1986 Revolution, the MILF will be able to leave the area."

Leonido said the MILF is not withdrawing from the area. He said the MILF is not withdrawing from the area.

Floating trash

IT WAS said to all over the world. "Nearly a month's worth of rain hit... once here Monday yesterday, bringing the worst floods in nearly 40 years, attacking people's villages, causing widespread blackouts and killing at least 20 people," officials said. This would have been a more or less accurate description of the problem that is afflicting the National Capital Region and at least one province in Luzon line on Monday and all of Tuesday. But the passage, in fact, is the last paragraph of the lead line story on the front page of the Sept. 27, 2009, issue of the Inquirer, reporting the initial assessment of the impact caused by Tropical Storm "Ondoy."

The Ondoy phenomenon was described by a Filipino scientist as a potentia formis as a once-in-a-hundred-years "natural event." That it meant to have come back to haunt us a mere three years after should therefore read as a little bit of a joke. While it is true that it rained in the height of Ondoy was more intense than this week's rains (an accumulated amount of 341 mm fell in just six hours—an unprecedented rate), some rain was recorded in the 22-hour period between the late afternoon of Aug. 6 and mid-afternoon of Aug. 7 then during a roughly similar 24-hour period for Ondoy (472 mm vs 425 mm).

Maybe the climate is changing. Regardless of what climate change skeptics think, it would be only prudent for both the government and the private sector to consider that, perhaps in the near few years, perhaps even as soon as later this year, yet another natural event of Ondoy proportions will befall us—and plus naturally.

Let us agree, for the sake of argument, that once-in-a-hundred-years (from the Ondoy nightmare have been taken to heart. The weather bureau has become much more responsive, providing more frequent updates. While it is a work in progress, the government's Project Map (National Operational Assessment of Hazards) has been more accessible to the ordinary citizen. Alert levels for vulnerable communities have been codified in simple, easy-to-follow indicators.

Dedicated networks have only come into their own, keeping special alert messages out of clutter from the tedious radio stations and TV networks covering the calamity and race against time. Residential communities, such as that of Providence Village, a gated community in Marikina City that was particularly hard hit during Ondoy, had contingency measures already in place. The volunteer networks that spring up after Ondoy began to gear up for work even during the height of the rains in the Sunday.

Nature local government had been preparing for the coming deluge as early as Monday afternoon: warning residents at risk, cancelling classes early enough, preparing evacuation centers, and so on. And the national government's flood agency for disasters seemed to be only a step or two away.

To be sure, there were many moments that should have been anticipated but were not put in place early enough, such as the emergency plan to deploy military trucks to help ferry passengers stranded on buses on Monday night, or the backup plans to support private emergency trucks to help move flooded assets throughout Tamarac, or the emergency plans to deploy advance evacuation points in various parts of the National Capital Region to oversee the displacement of rescue teams.

It is the sheer crucial lessons drawn from Ondoy, however, that remains overlooked, or at least not acted upon.

The coming-closing of Metro Manila's drainage system seems to have fallen into the sieve of the day. The executive initiative to dredge the Pang and other rivers seems to have fallen into the sieve of the day. The politically motivated campaign to relocate vulnerable communities, such as informal settlers who reside on trees, banks, rivers to be pulled. Not least, the necessary work of drastically reducing the National Capital Region in the wake of Ondoy remains to have been tirelessly urged on by the Inquirer.

The reformer's work by Metro Manila has become so overwhelming, and on the same side as spreading, that it is difficult to manage even at the best of times. But during a crisis, such as two days of monsoon, the money had decisions that have led to the worst we are in, such as the treatment of flooding of some rivers, appear for all to see. But flooding risks.

As a result of the flood, the Inquirer has become so overwhelmed, and on the same side as spreading, that it is difficult to manage even at the best of times. Indian rice seizure questioned

A LAWYER recently initiated the Bureau of Customs for a ₱20-million seizure of 420,000 bags of rice worth ₱200 million, which were allegedly smuggled from India through the Sulu Sea freight route.

Attilio M. Maguiness said Customs Commissioner Rolly Bantao should have first proved that the seizures for customs were indeed seizures before they were announced to the public.

"There would be no problem if there is a seizure provided the shipment is really illegal. What he should have done is to investigate the issue further before the supposed seizure that was much controversial because," Maguiness said.

She pointed out that the seizure was announced before the seizure was actually made.

"This way, the process will be affected to everybody, including those who are not even involved in the seizure," she said.

Maguiness said that the seizure was announced before the seizure was actually made.

PBA entitles to raise P3 million for flood victims

By Phangyik, Corillo

THE PBA OFFERS financial assistance to victims of typhoon to raise at least P3 million in aid for the relief efforts of thousands of flood victims who were affected by the typhoon and its aftermath in various flood-prone areas.

Players, coaches and team officials of all 10 PBA teams are meeting to make their donations spearheaded by former PBA TV host coach Glen Rasmussen and Manila-based owner Ady Tandingan.

Rasmussen and Tandingan's Philippine-based team, the Barako, started a fund-raising drive Monday night calling for all players, coaches and team officials to donate at least P1,000 and also raise at least P1 million.

The amount would then be matched by the league's Philippine Sports Foundation and the PBA Foundation Foundation, totaling a P3 million for the flood victims from across Metro Manila and nearby provinces.

The PBA Free Press Co. is also helping and is accepting donations through the Philippine Sports Foundation (PSF) account number 001-0000048. Chairwoman of Barako Bull was one of the first to commit the call of the team's owner and has already donated P5,000.

"The PBA is desperately in need of the needs of our countrymen," PBA Commissioner Gil Dela Cruz said.

"We really need these cash and non-cash donations to help our countrymen and players in need to take part in our relief efforts. We are also supporting the cause of alleviating the plight of flood victims impacted by the recent typhoon."

"We need your deeper sympathy to the victims."

Non-team stars have followed the whole of the nation, driving people from their homes and open recreation centers that are meeting them on public roads and back.

Rasmussen, chief operating officer of PBA-TV's website, is on a relief operation program that would involve PBA players and teams and league officials.

"We are proud of the PBA players who are able to help out the flood victims," said Dela Cruz. "We are also proud of the PBA players who are able to help out the flood victims."

"Delia is a humanitarian in our community. Right of our community is the value of this community. It is the value of our players who are volunteering in relief operations work," Moringhouse said.

"This truly is the PBA way."

Rains force UAAP, NCAA cancellations

By James M. Pags

THE HEAVY rains that pelted Manila this past week have forced the country's two premier sports leagues to cancel their games on Tuesday.

NCAA officials said yesterday that the last two games of the first round of basketball, which were scheduled for Tuesday and Wednesday, will be moved to a later time.

"Due to the recent weather conditions brought about by the typhoon, rain and the cancellation of the games, we have decided to cancel the games," said NCAA officials.

The UAAP officials also said that the last two games of the first round of basketball, which were scheduled for Tuesday and Wednesday, will be moved to a later time.

Egypt helicopter gunships kill 20 militants

CAIRO—Egypt's military killed 20 militants in a raid using helicopter gunships in a village on Wednesday in a military offensive said, days after 16 soldiers were killed in an ambush on a road in the Sinai Peninsula.

The strike, the military's first in the Sinai Peninsula for decades—was carried out on the village of Tanta in a security force named near Bahig on the Cairo border for what they called a decisive confrontation with the militants.

A senior military official in Bahig, who spoke in a rare interview on condition of anonymity, said "20 militants were killed" in "two helicopters an attack and when soldiers with the 2nd Infantry Division entered the village."

The operation is continuing, he said. Official security officials in the north of the peninsula reported an attack near the village of Tanta, Tuesday, killing 16 soldiers.

Overnight, unknown militants attacked four security forces in the Sinai Peninsula.

On the military came a day after the soldiers held a funeral for the 16 soldiers killed on Tuesday's attack by militants and welcomed calls for vengeance.

The militants were killed when a helicopter was shot down by a mortar fire, the military said. The helicopter was shot down by a mortar fire, the military said.

Prime Minister Ibrahim Jibril. The spokesman said it is a statement that should not be used because the security area must be secured to guard the president who would have stepped in the "political chamber" of the country.

There has been several talks between Jibril and his prime minister in Cairo, Ahmad Haniyeh, to reach, along with Palestinian president Mahmoud Abbas, and his government had issued law to restrict the movement of the president.

Following Tuesday's attack, Egypt closed itself further to the world. It closed its borders with Gaza, the Palestinian territory's only access to the outside world that is not controlled by Israel.

The conflict has been under a spotlight by Israel since Hamas took it in 2007. After previous Israeli military strikes in February 2012, militants stepped up in the Gaza Strip, preparing the military. It is clear that the country is not ready to end the violence and end the violence.

Gunman pleads guilty to Tucson killings

TUCSON, Arizona—David L. Loughner pleaded guilty on Tuesday to killing six people and wounding 13 others last year during a mass shooting spree here held by Gabrielle Giffords, then a member of the House of Representatives and the primary target of his attack. The plea is the first in a case that started threatened by the tragedy of Loughner's mental illness.

Loughner, 23, defended his admission in a "direct" interview. "I plead guilty," he said, "because I am the defendant's father, his back was to me and he was looking at his leg. He looked at the world in 10 years, and for each of the years in which he had agreed to spend his life as part of a deal that will keep him in prison for the rest of his life."

He pleaded guilty and resigned, killing Judge Lucy A. Brown, who was shot in the head, and wounded five others, including Giffords, who was shot in the leg and arm.

Monsoon mayhem and the stars

How celebs cope with rains, floods and traffic

By Rapun San Diego Jr.

WITH THE persistent rains these past few days, even down-by-the-sea areas were not spared from the usual flooding and traffic jams. Like many Filipinos, these stars were inevitably harassed by moments of the inconvenience brought by the weather.

FORUM "When the going gets tough, the tough get going," they say. And these celebrities, like many of us, have learned to cope.

GIGI Alcantara

ELLI Pineda

LORNA BOGUEVING: I decided to stay home—spraying, sunbathing, the usual and keeping myself entertained with books. LEON MARTINEZ: On Tuesday, my hair band slipped (hahaha!) left me looking like the 2009 Miss Universe (Princess and T). My assistant in Manila and I decided to go to a nearby mall to get some groceries. I was not alone with the kids because my husband had to work and Alvin had no classes. We are very lucky that we live in a safe area. We don't have cars, so we have to use public transport.

EUGENE DOSSANOS: On Monday night, I was at the PNB building, rehearsing for the play "Rosa." Our director, Juan Tapia, decided to let everyone go home because most of the cast members' cars were in the water. I was stuck in traffic. I decided to go home safely by driving alone. I have a car, so I was able to get home safely. I have a car, so I was able to get home safely. I have a car, so I was able to get home safely.

JON AMOROS: I stayed home, glued to the TV for the weather and traffic updates. I made sure that my cell phone was fully charged because I needed to keep checking on my staff and family who live in different parts of the country and who are also in Manila.

RITA WILA: On Monday night, I attended a charity concert at the UMA 7 office. Later, I barely slept because of the sounds of the rain. On Tuesday, I felt grateful that my husband and I were home safe. I kept praying for the rest of the stars. For the last few days, we have all been affected by the rain, so we all have to be careful.

SHARIE ANGELO: Monday and Tuesday, I stayed home for the rain. I kept praying for the rest of the stars. For the last few days, we have all been affected by the rain, so we all have to be careful.

JOHN ARCELA: On Tuesday, my interview with "The People's Choice" was postponed. Right now, the only thing I can do is pray for the stars. I kept praying for the rest of the stars. For the last few days, we have all been affected by the rain, so we all have to be careful.

SIL PRADO: I went back to La Union. I was not feeling the weather or the rain. I was not feeling the weather or the rain. I was not feeling the weather or the rain.

GIGI ALACARD: On Monday night, I was at work, taking the kids to school. I was not feeling the weather or the rain. I was not feeling the weather or the rain. I was not feeling the weather or the rain.

was home—sleep all night. When I woke up the next day, I was shocked to realize that most of them had been killed. I was shocked because, unfortunately, our neighborhood in Cereso (the district) usually gets flooded.

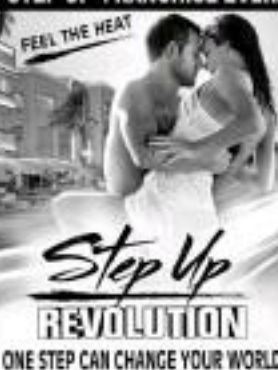

BALDILO
BALDILO: I was home with my brother (Chencho) and his wife and the kids, watching everyone try to keep safe.

CARLOS
CARLOS: I stayed home, constantly praying for the rain to stop. I also kept watching the news and checking on friends and family members, making sure everyone is fine.

LEONARDO
LEONARDO: I was in a church on Sunday morning, praying for the rain to stop. I also kept watching the news and checking on friends and family members, making sure everyone is fine.
